PERFORMANCE: Stormfront student Jaylee Daniels is just one of the many young performers you'll see & hear at Concert At The Homestead.

The concert lines up with Whyalla History Month and South Australia's History Festival.

The National Trust venue will serve as the perfect space for a relaxed afternoon of music from 2.00pm on Sunday, May 29.

Stormfront's Mark Tempany takes great pride in sponsoring community events such as this one.

"Concert at the Homestead will not only provide the Entry to the museum on the day is a gold coin donation, Whyalla community with a new event on their local entertainment calendar but it also gives our performers of all ages the opportunity to sing and play for a new audience in a family friendly environment," Mr Tempany said.

Stormfront's Alison Hams says it's a fantastic opportunity for all students involved.

"Stormfront performances give students an excellent insight into the wide and varied world with tea, coffee and soft drinks available.

of being a working musician," Ms Hams said.

"Large or small audiences, outdoors or in, we think it's really cool that we've averaged 8 performances a year for our students over the last 12 years."

Concert at the Homestead is open to the public, held in the Mt Laura Homestead Gardens on Sunday May 29 from 2.00pm and is free to attend.
